

NEW YORK FAMILY VIOLENCE LAWYER

Family Violence Attorney in New York

If you've been accused of family violence, law enforcement has some sort of proof that you made a violent act toward a relative, boyfriend/girlfriend, roommate or anyone else who has lived or is currently living under the same roof as you. Family violence is often assault and carries a class A misdemeanor penalty.

Arguments in the household aren't uncommon. Everyone argues, as it is rare that cohabitants agree all of the time. People may lose their temper and become violent and physical during what began as a verbal altercation. When this happens, law enforcement is usually called to the scene and it is almost definite that one of the parties involved will go to jail.

The person involved in the argument who contacts the police will be the witness during trial or the complaining witness. When injuries are involved, law enforcement will take pictures as photographic evidence. Sometimes the 911 call is used in the prosecution's defense as well.

New York City Family Violence Defense Attorney

Family violence crimes are nothing to take lightly. They can cause you to have to spend time in jail along with having to live with the reputation of someone who assaults others. This is why you will need to find a family violence lawyer in New York to work your case. A prime example is George Vomvolakis.

We have all seen it on television where the victim in a case decides to not press family violence charges. But in most states, including New York, you can still be prosecuted by the New York court system for the crimes at hand. This is mostly done for the victim's safety as there have been cases when the victim was threatened to not press charges. Other times the victim will call just out of revenge and pure spite, only to regret that decision as time passes.

Whatever your case may look like, ensure that your defense is bulletproof. You don't want the prosecutors to be able to find loopholes to exploit and make your case seem weak. Hiring a New York criminal lawyer will ensure that this situation won't become a nightmare.

Family Violence Cases

Each family violence case is different and a wise defense attorney will take that into proper consideration. If the victim in the case simply called law enforcement out of vengeance, then your defense lawyer will press heavily on that issue. Though it may seem minute, this type of detail can really change the outcome of your trial.

Contact a New York family violence lawyer today by calling George Vomvolakis. He is highly educated and experienced in providing a great defense for those who have been convicted of family violence. Don't go to court without a trusted lawyer by your side. To work with Mr. Vomvolakis during your trial, call (212) 682-0700 to schedule a free consultation.